

Decision-Makers talk about the right to vote

Inspired by the conversations that led to last week's wonderful "We the People" video, several young adult Decision-Makers asked to meet again this week, as we approach Election Day, to talk about voting, and what it means to them. For some, this was the first time they had voted, while for another, this was her third Presidential election, and she's only 25! Everyone thought it was important. Here are some of the things they said:

"I have a voice in who to vote for President."

"Voting is important because it means that my voice will be heard."

"My voice will be heard and I'm representing everyone else who may not be able to vote."

They also had many issues that they thought were important to consider in casting their votes:

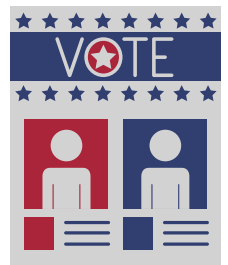

"How is Covid being handled? Our future is at stake."

"Who will make peace in the world?"

"I want to be sure that the vaccine gets tested twice so we can be sure it will be safe."

One Decision-Maker said

"I want education to be equal for everyone, and to be inclusive, for people with disabilities to get the same education as everyone else."

On that, everyone agreed!
