GOOD NEWS ABOUT GOOD NEWS
(an extra-long edition and a trip down Memory Lane)

In March, 2020, when the pandemic officially began, we had to vacate our offices at the Silberman School of Social Work at Hunter College in East Harlem, and begin the “new normal” of remote work and life. It seemed overwhelming, and potentially even impossible, as so much of our work was, literally, face to face. We worried about losing the fragile sense of community we had been working so hard to build. We needed something to cheer us up, and thought all of you did too. As part of an effort to “cultivate gratitude” we thought of the good things that had happened that week in the midst of all the uncertainty, sadness and fear—our first successful use of Zoom to conduct a Phase 2 facilitation meeting with a supporter in North Carolina; the excitement of a newly trained facilitator at “meeting” the Decision-Maker to whom she had just been assigned—and we decided that, as SDMNY, we actually had good news to share. And we even had a logo that incorporated our name—
